HALLEN'S VICTIMS. SUGAR AGAIN A FEATURE.

Dec. 6, Mr. Marshali said that he could not recollect the taking of the acknowledgment.

This morning, however, Mr. Marshall told an "Evening World' reporter that he had been thinking over the matter, and that he now remembered the personator of Mr. Jones very well and could pick him out of a hundred.

Mrs. Caldwell also says that Hallen obtained $8,300 from her on a forged draft for $45,600, purporting to have been drawn by Alexander A. Forman, a Brooklyn celestate man, and which was apparently accepted by Latimer & Williams, the bankers, both signatures being now known to be forgeries.

What has become of Hallen is a mystery, At his office nothing is known of his whereabouts, and he owes Lawyer Charles E. Hill, who rents the suit of rooms, one month's rent. He went away the morning after the discovery of the fraudulent mortsage, and Lawyer Marshall says Hallen gave out that he was going to Addison, N. Y., where he formerly lived, on some business matter. No one has heard anything of him since, and his anxious clients have not been able to get any satisfaction.

At the office of Hoadly, Lauterbach & Johnson, who are Mrs. Caldwell's lawyers, it was said that the civil proceedings were begun first in order to attach what property Hallen might have in the State. It was said that the civil proceedings might be instituted at any time of Sugar and 1,100 Lead what property there, and further measures would probably be taken when he returned.

In both cases it was said that forgery had been undoubtedly committed, but

It is said that many of his clients who were very bitter against him at that time returned to him. Hallen lived at the Hotel Endicott, at Eighty-first street and Amsterdam avenue. His wife and family are still there. No information as to his whereabouts could be obtained at the hotel this morning.

He adjourned the case until Monday at 10.30 A. M., when Judge Ingraham will again be sitting in Chambers. He signed an order directing the father to have the child in court Monday morning for the final disposition of the case.

After leaving the courtroom Attorney Mayer told an "Evening World" reporter that Gaul had moved furniture and personal effects from the flat at 141 East Ninety-sixth street, and he feared that he would take the child from the jurisdiction of the court before the decision had been rendered.

To avoid this, Lawyer Mayer has had the railroad depots and steamer docks watched. Mrs. Gaul and her father, Frederick Featherdew, yesterday received by mail letters advising them that their effects had been placed in charge of the janitor at the flat building.

About six months ago my little son, aged three, was very much troubled with a breaking out on his scalp and behind his ear. lively appearance this morning. It was Will Others Besides Capt. O'Connor Be Investigated?

Him in Vain.

The determination of the Police Board to investigate Police Capt. O'Conpor, late of the Tenderloin, as a result of the recent raids in that precinct made by his successor, Capt. Schmittberger, is causing considerable mirth of a scornin ful kind on the west side to-day.

O'Connor is to be investigated because he allowed the places found by Schmittberger to exist, and certain residents of that territory are now hinting that if Capt. Haughey, who succeeded Schmitt-berger in the Twenty-second Precinct, should develop a desire to do so he could place Schmittberger in the very same plight before the Police Board as that in which O'Connor finds himself. It is a notorious fact that there are many gambling houses and policy shops and disorderly houses in the Twentysecond Precinct to-day, and it is an equally notorious fact that they existed there under Schmittberger's regime. Whether O'Connor's friends will be able o get these facts before the Police Commissioners to Capt. Schmittberger's detriment remains to be seen. Certain property owners in the Twenty-second on a small scale some time before Capt Schmittberger's transfer from that precinct to comment on the seeming leth argy of the police in not taking action to abate at least the policy-shop nullate last night.

The lawyers told Justice Grady that have addressed four petitions to Capt. Schmittberger requesting him to suppress the policy-shops extending from Fiftieth to Sixtleth streets on Tenth and Eleventh avenues. They seem not to have been imbued exactly with the un selfish Parkhurstian spirit of reform in making these requests, inasmuch as they are said to have been moved solely by the fact that their tenants were wasting all their earnings on the policy game and had not the wherewithal left to pay

Desirous of ascertaining the extent to which the evil complained of by the landlords existed, "The Evening World" instituted a little investigation of its instituted a little investigation of its own.

Little children were found yesterday afternoon clustered around certain stores on Tenth and Eleventh avenues, between the streets indicated by the complaining landlords. The blinds of these stores were pulled down on the inside of the show windows and large yellow sporting posters were fustened to the glass panes in such a way that they might cover up every avenue of light into the respective places. The doors were locked.

What, then, were the children doing there?

there? They were waiting for 2.30 o'clock when the places would open and afford an opportunity of placing their tiny mites on Fortune's wheel to be swept away into the pocket of the policy banker. sway into the pocket of the poncy banker.
So at least they said, and the corroborating voices were so many as to leave no doubt that they were telling the truth. "The Evening World" reporter accosted a little girl scarcely six years old, with the question:
"Say, sissy, what time does the shop open?" at the same time pointing to the store in front of which she and several others of about her age and of both sexes, were standing.

others of about her age and of both sexes, were standing.
"Ha'-pas'-2' was the reply.
"What are you waiting here for?"
A sneer chased across the faces of the midget throng, and then one of them answered:
"Four-eleven-forty-four, o' course."
"What's your name, youngster?" queried the reporter of the last speaker. After a momentary heastation, the little fellow saucily replied:
"Joe."
"Joe what?"

"Joe what?"
"Murray," And then he added almost streets, on the west side of Eleventh avenue.

There is another one on the opposite side of the avenue, within less than a stone's throw of the one frequented by Eddie Lee. There another group of children was collected.

None of the adults in the neighborhood would admit the existence of these places. When asked, they invariably shrugged their shoulders and said:

"We don't bother with such things. It's none of our business what other people do. Everybody has a right to make a living." a living. A gentleman who has been studying the problem of wiping out evil resorts of every kind in that section of the city, told the reporter that he had gathered aimple evidences of the existence there of disorderly houses, which he would in time place at the disposal of the public, but that he had not yet had an opportunity to look into the policy shop question. question.

"Now, however, that my attention has been called to it," he said, "I shall make every effort to gather in evidence against this pernaps equally pernicious, policy nuisance, and within a very few days the police, unless they grow active in the meanwhile and close up these places, may be prepared to hear something drop."

At the West Forty-seventh street sta-At the West Forty-seventh street station, from which all crimes in the Twenty-second Precinct are suppressed when detected, the sergeant at the desk told "The Evening World" reporter that he had no knowledge or information concerning the existence of any policy shops, nor had he heard of any petition having been made for their suppression. The question has been raised whether a similar state of affairs could not be found in all the other precincts where the commanders have recently been changed if Capt. Schmitttberger's zeal in the "Tenderloin" was displayed by the new commanders.

for several months. His arrest was the result of a confession made last night by David Lenner, a convicted incendiary, who was yesterday afternoon sentenced to fifteen years in State prison.

Lenner, it is rumored, has made startling disclosures, which show the existence of an organized gang of firebugs for the purpose of destroying buildings and getting big insurances on their goods. Lenner, it is alleged, has said he was intimidated under threats of death into 1510-15, the conspiracy.

IRVING AND THE DOG.

The Actor Buys a Collie, Wnich Does Not Feel Proud of Its New Master.

Mr. Henry Irving was in Scotland two Mr. Henry Irving was in Scotland two or three Summers ago, and on one of his walks he frequently met a shepherd with a fine collie, says the Blackburn Times. Ee took a fancy to the dog, and a few days before leaving he said to the Highlander:

"I will give you 650 for your collie." The shepherd seemed surprised at the amount offered and was struck with sadness, for he was poor and wanted the money, yet he had formed so strong an attachment to the dog that he could not bear the thought of parting with it. After deliberating for a while he said:
"Na. sir, I weel no tak' the feefty pund."

girl, who had first tolo the reporter that they were waiting for the policy shop to open. She, like all the others, was hunger-pinched.

Starvation looked through their leaden eyes. Their faces seemed baked with dirt, with here and there a spot of pallid thue, indicating their sickly condition. And yet this little girl bred in the atmosphere of gambling, or perhaps worse, was honestly shocked to hear her companion beg for a cent. She did not seem moved by the deliberate lie he had uttered concerning his name. When taken by task for the lie, he explained:

"I 'as afraid youse was goin' to arrest me."

He then admitted that he lived in the houses where the policy shop was located this particular one being on the block between Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth streets, on the west side of Eleventh avenue.

There is another one on the opposite able.

A few days after his return Mr. Irving took his dog into Kensington Gardens, and for a moment the poor creature brightened at the sight of a few sheep that were grazing under the trees, but soon discovering that they were not his own flock, and that his master was not near, he relapsed into his usual dejection.

After this it was very difficult to get him to take any food, and as he soon lost his fine appearance and grew lenn Mr. Irving decided to give him his liberty. So he returned him as a present to the Highlander, who afterwards wrote that the dog was so overjoyed to get back home that he leaped upon his master's shoulders, and then ran about the hills so wildly that he (the shepherd) feared for a time that he would go mad.
